From Historical Sketches of Pocahontas County, W. Va., by William T. Price. "Ruben Buzzard, the progenitor of the Buzzards, was the son of an emigrant from Germany, who settled near Lancaster, Pa. Upon his marriage with a Miss Sicafoose, in Pendleton County, he settled on lands now in possession of his descendants between Glade and Frost. An apple tree found near his frontier home may have been the largest in the state. It measured three feet and six inches in diameter. The branches were about forty feet long. Seventy-five bushels have been gathered from this tree at one time". William T. Price further states, "From what we can gather from Ruben Buzzard's personality, he seems to have been a man that pondered Agur's prayer to good purpose: 'Two things have I required of Thee, deny me them not before I die. Remove far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me: Lest I be full, and deny Thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.'" James Rodgers, my great-grandfather, was a native of Madison County, born February 15, 1789. His first marriage was with a Miss Jackson, also of Madison County. He moved to Pocahontas County in 1824 and settled on Lewis Ridge, overlooking Buckeye Cove. Thus he and his family became identified with Pocahontas County almost from its organization.

Quoting from Historical Sketches Pocahontas County, W. Va., by William T. Price: "James Rodgers was an industrious person whose arduous toils and severe privations helped to make our county what it is."

In his time, James Rodgers had the reputation of being one of the most industrious of working men. He tried to train his sons and daughters to habits of industry and strict economy. Soon as they became old enough for service they went from home and found ready employment as field hands and housekeepers. This venerable man was a zealous and devoted adherent of the Methodist Protestant church. He was one of the first members in the Buckeye society and probably one of the first in the county. His prayers and experience talks were in good language, interspersed with allusions to the parables and quotations of the promises. All this indicated that in early, impressive youth he must have been familiar with persons of more than ordinary culture, such as Madison County was distinguished for. In his speech he had the tone and style that characterized the old Virginia gentry, as the writer learned to know in subsequent years from actual acquaintance with east Virginians.

The writer cherishes the memory of this old citizen with feelings of much respect, as the two often toiled in the meadows and harvest fields side by side in his boyhood. He remembers being often impressed by the pathos and fervency of the old man's occasional prayers in the morning worship. This was something which was never omitted in the old Marlinton home.

The belief of the older people was that 'prayer and provender hinder no man', and so time was always found for prayer, as well as for breakfast and supper.

Some of his expressions still linger in memory after more than fifty years. (The first edition of this book was published July, 19, 1901.) One was an allusion to the grapes of Eschol as typical of the richness of the promised land. His idea was that God would give his humble praying people here while on the pilgrimage, a cluster now and then from the heavenly vine so as to refresh and encourage them to put forth their earnest, faithful efforts to go up and receive possession of the heavenly land. This allusion was utilized as suggestive of a sermon prepared and preached by the writer thirty years ago. May we meet and see for ourselves the blessed land in all its richness and glorious beauty, and especially the vine from which the clusters were gathered that cheered and encouraged him."

Seven children were born to James Rodgers and his first wife: Robert, Joseph, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, Mary, and Tabitha. I have no information on six of them. Robert married Sally Smith, daughter of John Smith and Sally Moore Smith. They lived near Buckeye and later moved to Nicholas County.

The Auldridges

The other day Mrs Mary Auldridge Harper, of Hillsboro, came in for to inquire what all I remember of what I had been told of her father's family, the Auldridges. I was honest enough to confess that my knowledge along most any line was scattering, few in the bill, far apart and thin in places.

Any way, here is the line of descent of the lady. William Auldridge was a native of England. His widowed mother, Elizabeth, brought him to America, prior to the year 1800. The tradition is he was ten or twelve years old. He grew up on the Johnson Place, Jerico Road, near Marlinton.

William married Mary Cochran. She was a daughter of Thomas Cochran, a native of the north of Ireland. Her mother was named Mackemie, from Augusta County. The Cochrans lived at the Fred Ruckman place, near Mill Point. The Auldridges went to house keeping at Bridger Notch, near where the Bridgers Brothers, John and James, were bushwhacked by the Indians, 1784. The homestead is still held by an Auldridge, Dr Sandy, great grandson of Pioneer William Auldridge.

One of the six sons of William and Mary Cochran Auldridge was Samuel. He married Miriam Barlow, daughter of John and Martha Waddell Barlow.

Their son was William, who married Edie Pennell. Their daughter is Mrs Mary Auldridge Harper, who visited me the other day. She is the widow of the late Harry Harper.

I do not remember ever hearing the maiden name of Elizabeth mother of William Auldridge. I do recall stories about her. She died in her home on Jerico Farm in the year 1874, aged 114 years. I was told she was a lady of slight build; small hands; "fingers like birds' feet."

The tradition is that the name for presuming to marry above and beyond his station in life.

In the course of a few years, marked by unemployment, privation and discouragement, the husband sickened and died. He left a young widow and their son, William.

Mrs Auldridge made strong resolve that her son should grow up in the free land of America, where men are on equal footing before the Lord and before the law.

But, the passage money for the six weeks' of a sea voyage!

However, there was the indentured servant statute. Under it, the ship master took a paper, setting out the amount of the passage money, and providing for sale of the services of the signor at public auction; the bid for the shortest period of servitude to be accepted.

John Johnson was a Revolutionary soldier. As a boy, he was at Braddock's Defeat, 1756. An item he brought back was an aid. This is owned by a great-great-grandson, Ed C. Moore.

John Johnson owned a plantation, Jericho, of 1500 acres, on Jerico Road. I have recently examined his will. It was signed in April 1825 and probated, March Court, 1826.

John Johnson's wife died in the late 1790's. He needed a governess with an education for a house full of children. Such a treasure was to be found occasionally at the auctions of indentured servants in Richmond. So, John Johnson took a string of young horses, packed with products of plantation and country side, and bled away on the 200 mile journey to Richmond, on a trading trip. At the auction of indentured servants he bid in the widow Auldridge and her son, William. He brought her and the boy back to Jericho Farms. Later, he married her.

Mrs Johnson lived to see two of her husband's grandsons elected to the United States Senate—Senator Ewing, of Ohio, and Senator Farnsworth, of West Virginia. Both were born on Jericho Farms.

It could well be added here that a Stevenson married into this Ewing family connection. So, in their line, we have had an Adlai Ewing Stevenson as Vice President of the United States, and the chance is good that another Adlai Ewing Stevenson will be elected President of the United States. And so mote it be.

William Auldridge married Mary Cochran who was a daughter of Thomas Cochran, a native of north of Ireland. Her mother was named Mackemie, from Augusta County. The Cochrans lived at the Fred Ruckman place, near Mill Point.

William Auldridge was a native of England. His widowed mother, Elizabeth, brought him to America prior to the year 1800. He was probably ten or twelve years old. He grew up on the John son Place, Jerico Road, near Marlinton.

William and Mary Cochran Auldridge went to housekeeping at Bridger Notch, near where the Bridgers Brothers, John and James were bushwhacked by the Indians, 1784. Dr. Sandy Auldridge, a great grandson of Pioneer William Auldridge owned the homestead for years, it is now owned by . The Auldridges had six sons. One of these sons was Samuel. He married Miriam Barlow, daughter of John and Martha Waddell Barlow. Their son was William, who married Effie Pennell. Their daughter, Mrs. Mary Auldridge Harper, who was married to Harry Harper

Mrs. Mary Auldridge Harper related the following story about the Auldridge family to Mr. Cal Price who published it in the Pocahontas Times, Sept. 3, 1953:

Mrs. Harper said she did not remember ever hearing the maiden name of Elizabeth, mother of William Auldridge. She did recall stories about her. She said Elizabeth died in her home on Jerico Farm in the year 1874, aged 114 years. Mrs. Harper said she had been told that she was a lady of slight build; small hands; "fingers like birds' feet."

The tradition is that the name in England was Aldrich. Before her marriage to a commoner, Elizabeth was a lady in waiting on Queen Charlotte, at the court of George III, King of England. Mrs. Harper supposed that this would imply she was a high born lady.

A visitor on occasions to Queen Charlotte was Catherine II, Empress of Russia. One of these visits the lady in waiting received the salesman with an engagement to show the Empress ware of a maker of fine pottery. The young tradesman showing the ware to the royal customer was named Aldrich. At a guess, his name might have been William. When Elizabeth and William saw each other, it was love at first sight.

And what a tempest it all did raise. Mrs. Harper said, "We of this generation remember how a king of England got himself dethroned for hooking up with a commoner. A century half ago, the divine rights of kings and courtiers was not the silly pretense and show George Washington and Company, Unlimited showed it to be.

William and Elizabeth were married. Elizabeth was dropped from the queen's list of ladies in waiting. She was disowned by her family. They seemed to feel their name was dishonored when she would marry her true love.

Auldridge was fired off the job. In the course of a few years, marked by unemployment, privation and discouragement, the husband sickened and died. He left a young widow and their son, William.

Mrs. Auldridge made strong resolve that her son should grow up in the free land of America, where men are on equal footing before the Lord and before the law.

But, the passage money for the six weeks' of sea voyage was something she didn't have.
However, there was the indentured servant statute. Under it, the ship master took a paper, setting out the amount of the passage money and providing for sale of the services of the signor at public auction; the bid for the shortest period of servitude to be accepted.

Henry Barlow. - An Appreciation.

By Wm. T. Price, D. D.

With pathetic frequency the past few years prominent and influential citizens of Pocahontas county, West Virginia, have passed away. One of these was Henry Barlow, near Edray, West Virginia, the subject of this appreciation prepared as a tribute to his memory, which is fondly cherished by numerous friends and near relatives throughout his native county, and by very many persons in various localities in West Virginia. His ancestry both paternal and maternal is of pioneer derivation. His father was the venerable John Barlow, Sen., near Edray, West Virginia. John Barlow, Sen., was the only son of Alexander Barlow of Bath county, Virginia, an English emigrant, and his wife Barbara was an English young person whose family name was Rowse.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Barlow were living in Bath county when the Revolutionary War was in progress. He went into service and was never heard of after the battle of Brandywine. The prevailing opinion has been that he died in that famous engagement.

In 1806 John Barlow married Martha Waddell. Not long afterward he bought a piece of land from Thomas Brock on Red Lick Mountain, which was paid for in venison at fifty-cents a saddle. Here the pioneer built his home, reared his family and passed the most of his married life. This property was finally owned by his son Henry, and is a part of the ample legacy bequeathed to his heirs. His family consisted of ten sons and five daughters. The sons were William, Alexander, James, John, Nathan, Josiah, Henry, Amos, George and Andrew. The pioneer's daughters were Elizabeth, who became the wife of the late William Baxter, Esq. Miriam, who became Mrs. Samuel Auldridge; Mary Ann married James Auldridge; Ellen who died at the age of four years; and an unnamed daughter dying in infancy, a few weeks old. Mr. and Mrs. John Barlow being conscientiously honest themselves they believed everybody else to be likewise honest, and thus were Israelites indeed in whom there was no guile. On them and their children rest the blessing promised the meek and pure in heart; provided they cherish purity, good deeds and humility as their venerated pioneer ancestors have the reputation of doing. Henry Barlow Esq. was the seventh son of the pioneer, and was born at the Red Lick Mountain home, February 21, 1827.

Mr. Barlow was married twice. The first marriage, January 30, 1855, was with Rachel Cameron Hickman, daughter of Elliot Hickman, a native of Bath county, Virginia. She was born June 2, 1836, and died in 1861, aged twenty-five years. The children of this marriage were Rachel and Evaline, both of whom died in childhood; Alice who became Mrs. George K. Gay, of Buckhannon, West Virginia; John Elliot now a merchant at Edray, West Virginia. Mrs. Nancy Jane Matilda Barlow, the second wife, was born August 19, 1841, and was married to Mr. Barlow September 22, 1862, was a daughter of William Cassell and Mrs. Matilda Cassell, on Back Alleghany. The sons and daughters of the second family were Cammie, Amos Neal, William Anderson, Regina Ruth, who became Mrs. James N. White, West Union vicinity; Davis Levi, Page Dameron, Asa Clark, Effie Florence, who became Mrs. Joel E. Peck, near Lewisburg, West Virginia; Albert Wickline who died aged five years, and an unnamed daughter dying in infancy. All of the surviving children are residents of Pocahontas county, excepting Mrs. Peck and Page Dameron, who is a popular physician, in McMechen city near Wheeling West Virginia.

It may be pertinent moreover to mention that Mrs. Barlow's father William Cassell, was twice married and she and her brother George were of the first marriage. George Cassell was a Confederate soldier and died of eight wounds received a few days before his death. Such was his sister's affection she took a journey of more than a hundred miles on horseback to be with him in his dying sufferings.

In reference to Mrs. Barlow's father's second family there were seven children born. Their mother's maiden name was Nancy Collins, daughter of Charles Collins of John Collins, the ancestral immigrant. Mary Catharine became Mrs. Thomas Beverage; Martha Ellen was married to Robert Sutton, a prominent teacher of schools; Louise became Mrs. Cassell; William Cassell, Jr. married India Sutton and lives upon the old homestead; Sarah Ann died at the age of thirteen years; Charles migrated to the far west; George went to Texas and after numerous adventures on cattle ranches, was drowned in the Yellowstone river while in charge of a Texas herd. So she had a brother and a half brother George, one named after the other.

Mrs Barlow's much lamented death occurred June 20, 1906 in her sixty-fifth year. In his two marriages Mr. Henry Barlow was highly favored. His wives conscientiously and efficiently "did him good and not evil" all the days of their lives respectively and they were gratefully appreciated by him and the children.

Henry Barlow's career as a business man was of a character to demonstrate the fact that Pocahontas county has in her gift all that a reasonable person should aspire to, whose assets may be only two hands and a mind to be diligent in business, yet fervent in spirit serving the Lord. For forty years he was a member of the firm of Barlow & Moore, at Edray, and in the meanwhile operated largely as a farmer and grazier, ably and industriously assisted by his sons. He virtually performed the service of a Banker years before a bank was thought of as feasible for Pocahontas county. When banks came to be organized he was among the first directors. It should be remembered to Mr. Barlow's credit that he was an enthusiast in favor of public schools, though himself among the prominent taxpayers. He served for years on the Edray Board of Education. He had the privilege of seeing his son, Davis L. serving with marked credit terms as County superintendent of schools and as a member of the West Virginia Legislature 1906-7, whose educational qualifications from first to last were due to the West Virginia public school system. For many years he was an interested visitor of the Teachers Institutes for Pocahontas county, and would make humorously characteristic addresses when speaking of his exploits and services as a "Member of the Board of Ignorance."

Having thus briefly mentioned the foregoing particulars, it remains now to consider Mr. Barlow's christian life that was such a marked feature of his personal character for sixty-five years. August 1843, Rev. T. J. Dyerly in charge of the Pocahontas circuit, conducted a protracted meeting at Mrs. Phobe McNeill's barn on Swago. This building one of the more commodious of its kind, stood in the meadow about half way between the Swago fording and the mill race. It was during this meeting he professed conversion, August 29th and in a few weeks afterwards was received at Hamline Chapel, as a member of the M. E. Church. At experience meetings while speaking of his conversion he was frequently heard to say, "that the hay and the old barn logs looked as bright as the noonday sun."

Robert Moore, the class leader and a steward of the church, asked the young member whether he would like to give some thing for the use of the church. His reply was, "I would, but have nothing to pay." Mr. Moore said, "I will pay for you and you can pay me back in work." Mr. Moore placed 50 cents to the credit of the young member, which was soon worked out in one of the Edray fields. In reference to this occurrence, Mr. Barlow often observed "he never saw the time since that he could not pay something toward the support of the church." Mr. Moore's son, Rev. George Preston Moore, became in course of time Mr. Barlow's business associate in the mercantile firm of Barlow & Moore, elsewhere referred to. Those knowing Mr. Barlow intimately say that during his whole religious life he was never known to refuse contributing something in aid of any christian church in his vicinity. From a letter written me by one who knew and understood Mr. Barlow's character better than any living person, some extracts are given illustrative of the attractive phases of his character. "He was a man who always desired peace, and because he many times aided in making peace between others, he was often called a peace maker."

"You might speak of him as a genial, gracious, kindly man, who treated all who came in the circle of his acquaintance, rich or poor, with the same rare and exact courtesy. He had a pleasant word for every one. His jovial disposition will be remembered by all his friends. His mirth of him as a christian. I well remember how faithfully he attended all the services of his church, and how he regretted so much when bad health kept him from the house of the Lord. On a Sunday morning just after I had entered the pulpit, some one handed me a message from him in which he stated that that was his seventieth birthday, and would apologize for his absence from the services, giving sickness as a reason.

We have a picture in our home which we prize very highly. It is of the interior of the Edray Methodist Episcopal church and the Sunday school, with brother Barlow, Bible under his arm in the midst as Superintendent. He must have left his impress on many minds and hearts as he labored in this capacity. I well remember hearing him publicly exhort his sons by name to become christians, and beg their forgiveness if he had ever done or said anything that was calculated to keep them from becoming followers of their savior.

At the first of our association, brother Barlow would sometimes remark: "Death seems to be a leap in the dark." But later on the gloom seemed to be less dense, occasional rifts were in the clouds and light came through, and he came to see more clearly that it is the heaven given privilege of the child of God to know at least something of what is in the beyond, and to have a good degree of certainty as to what that beyond had in store for him.

I trust that those who were his intimate friends at the last, heard from his lips language like this, "Brighter and brighter unto the perfect day." He has gone on before us a little while and we expect to greet him in the great beyond in the morning of a better day.

Upon which of his sons has his mantle fallen?

W. A. SHARP.

Guyandott, W. Va. March 29, 1909.

I had the honor of being the pastor of this devoted "father in Israel" for nearly five years and knew him to be a faithful and consecrated man. While too feeble to attend the church services regularly as in former years, he was still quite frequently found there and his very presence was an encouragement to all.

I often visited him in his home and also had the privilege of his company in my own home, and always found him a wise counselor, retaining his interest in the work of the church up to the last few days of his earthly pilgrimage.

Father Barlow was a very spiritual man and thoroughly loyal to his church, in which he was a very prominent member for a long period of years, being continued to the last as an honorary Class-Leader, although too feeble to officiate except at rare intervals.

I talked and prayed with him the day before he passed away and found him trusting in the Savior, saying if God called him "it was all right." When asked if he wanted prayer, he replied, "all the time," and during the prayer was heard to make frequent responses.

He is greatly missed, not only by his immediate friends, but by the church and by the community. But while ours is the loss, his is the eternal gain and "we do not sorrow as those who have no hope," but trust to meet him at last in the better, brighter world.

I esteem it a great privilege to bring my tribute of respect to the memory of a brother in Jesus and dear friend personally. For five years 1894-1899 I was intimately associated with him as his pastor, and the more I knew of him the stronger were the bonds that bound me to him.

His sunshiny disposition coupled with his witticisms made him a companion with whom it was a pleasure to while away the hours of an otherwise unpleasant journey. His geniality and whole hearted hospitality made it a great pleasure to be a guest in his home. But I would especially speak been an inspiration to me and many are the individuals whose life has been brightened, whose faith in God strengthened and whose religious experience sweetened by having fellowship with this saintly man of God.

Surely it can be said of him that "many will rise up and call him blessed."

In reviewing the life and character of the pioneers of our country, we find there are many noble men whose names are linked with character building, and who will be held up to the children of the rising generations as beacon lights in laying the foundation of civil and religious training. Many, we say, whose names stand high upon the roll of honor, men who have done a noble work, and whose fame will live on for generations to come; but the subject of this memoir—Mr. Henry Barlow—stands out prominently among these all.

Born and reared of humble parentage, he did much toward the development of his native county and state; and in the training of his large family of children he left an impress upon their lives which can never be obliterated. A man of sterling worth and character, generous to a fault, ready to forgive, ready to testify for his Lord and Master, ready to lend a helping hand to those in distress, he went about doing good. The writer of this sketch never had a better friend.

By reason of strength, his life was prolonged beyond the "four score years" but this long and busy life is only a moment when compared with the life upon which he has now entered. But he is gone. We miss his stately step-pings; we miss his counsels; we miss his prayers, but it is ours to meet him.

"There in that bright world above,
In Heaven that happy place,
Where we shall tell of a Savior's love,
And sing we are saved by grace."

E. H. MOORE.

My father, John Barlow was among the first pioneers to emigrate from Pocahontas county, West Virginia, to what was then called the West. He died in Schuyler county, Missouri, September 9, 1858, leaving me a child but six years of age. It was not my privilege to meet any of my near relatives until May, 1892. I at this time visited my Uncle Henry Barlow, my father's young brother. When I went to his home I was informed that he had driven his cattle to the mountain range and would be "back" in a day or two. It is needless for me to say that I was made to feel at home and the time did not appear long until my uncle's return. I remained a guest in his home for one month. Now in a word let me say just how he impressed me. I considered him as one of the most delightful and attractive men that it had been my privilege to meet. "To know him was to love him."

He was a man of deep intellect, good judgment, a wise counselor and devotedly religious. He loved the church of his choice and loved to talk of his hopes and prospects of Heaven. At the time of my visit his dear wife was living. She was a devoted christian mother and both father and mother were deeply interested in the welfare and salvation of their children. I never met this mother again, but it was my pleasure to have my uncle visit me in October, 1901. I hope to meet these good relatives in the "sweet bye and bye."

HENRY AMOS BARLOW.

Pastor in Charge of Charleston Circuit,
W. Va. Conference.

I am bewildered as to where to begin, and what to say first in my tribute, but I go back to the days of my boyhood and remember Henry Barlow as being my big associate and well remember the occurrence of fifty-six years ago, when in my mischief, I plagued him almost beyond endurance, and to give me a "settler" he caught me up by the heels and proposed to immerse me in a barrel of water head first. I remember that I succumbed and promised him to be a good boy and mind "mama."

In November 1867, I entered into a contract with him and his younger brother, Amos Barlow, in the mercantile business at Edray, West Virginia. After a few years he bought his brother out, and he and I have been, and were continuously associated together in this business until 1902, in which year A. R. Gay bought him out, and thus closed our business partnership of something over thirty-five years, and these years comprehended an annual settlement in which hundreds of dollars were in the balance and had to be adjusted and arranged. In all these settlements we were able to adjust our money matters without a single jar or word of dispute over any question that arose.

In morals and religion he was a church member as early as I can recollect anything about him, and in all the intervening years from that time until now, I have known him as staunch and reliable christian gentleman, always ready to help the fallen and cheer the faint, and in sustaining financially and spiritually the interests of the church of his choice he could always be relied upon.

Socially he was always a cheer to any company anywhere, and the memory of his life and character will be his monument. "If a man die he shall live again." Yes, he lives.

GEORGE P. MOORE.

My pleasant acquaintance with Mr. Henry Barlow was limited to one meeting, but our social and fraternal enjoyment at that time was unusually sweet and I shall not forget it. He was then visiting in Lewisburg and we dined together at the home of the Misses Lipps. I found him genial in conversation, with a warm and broad interest in God's work, a lover of christians of every name. He seemed eager to know good men and loved to be with them just for the pure enjoyment of the association. Old age in him was green and fruitful. Loving to be with God's people here, what must now be the bliss of his association with them in Heaven! What joy for him to see Christ.

EUGENE DANIEL.

Pastor Presbyterian Church, Lewisburg, W. Va.

I first met him in the spring of 1896 and well do I remember my first impression of him. His snow white hair and beard enclosing a face of such benevolence, and kindness that I was reminded of the fathers of old. In memory I see him now ringing the old dinner bell--welcoming a stranger to his home and heart, and for the entire 14 years which I knew him the bell of welcome never ceased to ring.

His life was an open book for all to read. His life was pure. He spoke no evil word of any one: always gentle, unobtrusive, kind and gracious—a gentleman without a blemish. He is gone and is at rest, yet how lonely we feel when we stop to think that we will never again see him on the shores of time. We must hope and strive for the goal that he has reached, happy with his Lord and Savior in the realm above, where I sincerely hope we shall all meet "to part no more."

I regret that circumstances prevented my attending his funeral, but I was there in spirit.

(Miss White taught two terms of public school at Onoto. Mr. Barlow was at special pains to make her stay pleasant. Her tribute shows how she appreciates such kindness and friendship, and it also represents the sentiments of numerous other young friends.)

I was shocked and grieved to hear of Mr. Barlow's death. I had not heard of his illness.

It is hard to give up our loved ones but one can not help thinking of the "dear departed" as an aged pilgrim on life's road who has fought a good fight and been called to his reward. What an inspiration such lives are to us and how consoling their last words of love and trust. Yet in our weaker human nature we can not help grieving and feeling that we would like to call them back.

I valued Mr. Barlow's friendship very highly, and feel that in his death I have lost a highly honored and esteemed friend.

With kindest sympathy to all the relatives. I am, faculty was well developed and was quite noticeable in his last sickness." "Notice may be taken of the fact he seldom failed to hold family prayer. He often labored in the fields until he was so nearly worn out that it was a burden for him to walk to his home in the evenings, yet he would seldom retire to rest without first asking God's protection on his home.

"Some years ago he bought a tract of land on Cranberry Mountain. He was very fond of this mountain land and scenery, and would accompany his boys and work-hands when the stock would be moved to the range in the spring. Sometimes when the fences needed repairing and other work done, all would camp for a few nights under a cliff of rocks which would, be made dry and warm by burning logs. Here when the days work was finished, supper over, and after a short time spent in pleasant conversation, Mr. Barlow would repeat a hymn and ask all to assist in singing after which he would kneel in earnest prayer. The following is one of his favorite hymns which he often used in this mountain camp:

"Could we but stand where Moses stood
And view the landscape o'er;
Not Jordan's wave nor death's cold flood,
Could fright us from the shore."

"In his home Mr. Barlow was always kind and pleasant. Never complained of his surroundings. In fact his home life was stainless. To his family he was faithful in every detail of duty. He did nothing that his children would wish to change, amend or recall; nothing to cause them to blush or apologize. His children's welfare seemed to be constantly upon his mind, and during his last sickness he often inquired if they were present. One great purpose of his life was to assist them. This is evidenced by a remark which he made just before his death, when he said in substance: "I am going away now. I leave something for my children. I have done the best I could for them, share and share alike."

"The last two or three years of his life were spent largely in visits to the homes of his children from McMechen to Lewisburg, and intervening localities in West Virginia. It must have been a precious solace to our departed friend and christian brother to have known that he leaves a group of sons and daughters for whom any father might be congratulated. All are giving promise of being worthy sons and daughters of a worthy father and the two revered mothers who have gone before.

The writer of this memorial tribute feels that in the decease of Mr. Barlow he parts with a friend from early youth, and one too who has been especially "lovely and pleasant" to him for the past twenty-four years, in ways too numerous to especially mention.

It seems to have been Mr. Barlow's intention to have a family reunion and ample preparations were being made for the deeply interesting occasion. His eighty-third birth-day was fixed upon as the date, February 21, 1909. As the sequel shows it pleased the All-wise One in whom we live and move and have our being to will it otherwise under very different auspices, thus illustrating in a very touching manner that though a man's heart may devise his way the Lord directeth his steps.

When it became apparent that he could not survive much longer, Mr. Barlow's children all gathered at the old home to be with their dying father at the supreme moment, except Mrs. Ruth Regina White, who was prevented by sickness. All of the son's wives were present excepting Mrs. John E. Barlow and Mrs. Page D. Barlow, who were providentially hindered. He was heard repeating his favorite hymn at intervals.

"There is a land of pure delight
Where saints immortal reign,
Infinite day excludes the night,
And pleasures banish pain."

His latest remembered words were to this effect. When asked, "Do you feel ready to go?" He exclaimed "Yes Hallelujah, Hallelujah."

Friday, February 19, 1909, he passed away serenely as a little child falls asleep in its mother's arms. Two days more he would have been eighty-two years of age, and the anticipated eighty-third birthday, with the reunion as arranged. The funeral services were performed by Revs. G. W. Marston and George P. Moore. As the 23rd Psalm was known to have been a special favorite with the deceased, it was selected and commented upon.

The remains were borne to the Edray graveyard by six of his sons as the Pall Bearers and there at the open grave, in the presence of an immense concourse of relatives, friends and neighbors, the burial rites were performed. The scene was impressively suggestive of these words, expressive of the thoughts and feelings the assembled hundreds must have realized.

“How many to their eternal home,
This solemn moment fly;
And we are to the margin come,
And soon expect to die.

“Dear Savior be our constant guide,
And when the word is given,
Bid the cold waves of death divide,
And land us safe in heaven.”

The dates of birth and death of this much esteemed personage are given in the biographical sketch of Henry Barlow to whom she was married in the year 1855. Her married life was short and at the age of twenty-five she answered to the roll call of the skies.

She was a faithful wife, a tender, self-sacrificing mother and a kind hearted neighbor. She possessed a gentle, sweet tempered disposition. She made her home happy and when I think of her death occurring as it did at such an early age I am reminded of the following lines from Whittier:

"The light of her young life went down,
As sinks behind the hills
The glory of a setting star Clear, suddenly, and still."
"As pure and sweet, her fair brow seemed Eternal as the sky;
And like the brook's low song, her voice,
A song that could not die."
"And half we deemed she needed not,
The changing of her sphere
To give to heaven a Shining One Who walked an angel here."

A FRIEND.

It was with profound sorrow that I read the notice of the death of Brother Henry Barlow, which occurred February 19, 1909. I have known him for about thirty-nine years, and to know him was to love him. His life was a Christian life from its responsible beginning to its cheerful close. His home was a Christian home, whose altar fires burned for quite a number of years. Here the weary Methodist Preacher always found a hearty welcome. He was loyal to his church and contributed largely of his means to the support of the gospel and the benevolent enterprises of the church. I esteem him as one of the best men I ever knew. The church will miss him as a Brother, the children will miss him as a father, the community will miss him as a neighbor, the county will miss him as a citizen. But he is not lost, but gone on before. And while he cannot return to us, we have the exalted privilege of going to him where we will never say good bye.

In the Memory of Mrs. Nancy J. M. Barlow

It was my pleasure to pay many visits to the home of Mrs. Barlow. I began to make these visits in my childhood days and continued to repeat them to the day of her death which occurred June 20, 1906. Her boys and I were playmates and we spent many happy hours together at the old Barlow home which stands in the sugar-tree grove near Onoto. It is needless for me to say that early in life I learned to respect and love my childhood neighbor, Mrs. Barlow.

She was a loving wife and mother, a kind neighbor, and scores of people can testify that she treated her visitors and guests with generous kindness and liberality. The door of her home was open to all and the stranger received the same kind treatment as the friend.

Mrs. Barlow's love for her family was never exhausted, it never changed; it never tired. It might be truly said that she was an angelic spirit in her home, and to her children the memory of this sainted mother is a paradise out of which they can not be driven away. As an evidence that such a mother will not be forgotten, let me quote from a public talk given by one of her sons some time ago. Among other things he said: "I cannot close without paying a tribute to the memory of mother. On that beautiful summer evening June 20, 1906, as the sun began to sink behind the western hills, as the shadows of the evening began to darken and as the flowers planted and tended by mother's hand began to close their petals for the night, mother cast aside the labors, trials, disappointments and hardships of this life and went into the eternal world.

"'Mother is gone!' is the saddest sentence that ever rang through my childhood home, and I tell you today that a boy cannot sustain a greater loss than to lose his mother. My mother was a most tender comforter and a wise counselor. I shall never forget mother. What a hallowed name! That name touches every fiber of my soul and strikes every chord of my heart with its angelic fingers. What tender associations are linked with mother. Her name calls up the fondest memories of life and opens in my mind the deepest and richest gushes of consecrated thought and feeling."

Mrs. Barlow made a profession of religion at the old McLaughlin church when she was fourteen years of age. She was a faithful member of the Methodist church for a half century and in her death the church sustained the loss of one whose place will not be easy to fill; but she has "entered into the rest that remaineth for the people of God."

Another hand is beckoning us,
Another call is given;
And glows once more with angels steps
The path that reaches Heaven.

P. L. CARTER.

In the Memory of Henry Barlow.

He was in my estimation more than an ordinary man; in power of mind; quickness to dissent from what was wrong, and approve the right.

In business correct and honorable; having an eye to see the right thing, and the will to do it.

In religion conscientious, always interested in the advancement of the church, a friend to the faithful minister, giving moral support and influence, also material support; ready to help the man who would try to help himself.

The writer was appointed to Pocahontas circuit, March 1876 and the first man who occupied the present Edray parsonage, he found much to do to put it in condition; for comfort and support. It was necessary that a part of the four acres including garden, should be plowed with a two horse plow. Bro. Barlow volunteered to furnish the team and feed free, the pastor doing the work. This resulted in a good crop of oats, and the next year a fine crop of hay.

We always found a friend in him, willing to help and counsel, giving good advice. He was genuinely fraternal with all Christian people, quick to feel any thing that might create trouble in any way or by any one. He was a steward for many years, and was always put in the lead with reference to the finances of the church.

With open heart and house, ready to receive and entertain the ministers whom he regarded as helping the cause; giving his disapproval openly to whatever he thought was not right, out spoken against all manner of evil, and having very little use for the man who tried to make his way by unfair dealing.

By industry, economy, good judgment, and judicious management, he acquired a competency and brought up a large family, some of whom have reached honorable positions. Being blessed with good wives he had much help in the home. We pray that his mantle may fall on his sons, and though he has passed over, they may imitate his Godly life and be as useful in the church and neighborhood as their venerated father. We shall meet soon in the glorious heavens above.

Wednesday - April 20,

Dear Betsey & All the Family:

Since I received your nice letter written in March I have been thinking I would get it answered but as you can see - here it is the 20th of April but maybe I can get this in the mail yet before the day is over.
I'm like you - I seem to stay busy all the time and find very little time for writing letters. However, I think of all of you often and it is always my intention to get started on a letter but the days get by entirely too fast. Then too - I write so many letters and notes at Christmas that I let down entirely for weeks and months. We enjoyed so much hearing from you and how all of you spent Christmas etc. Am glad you had a lovely time.

We are as usual here at the present time and getting ready for a busy spring and summer. The grass is about ready to be cut in the lawns and when that starts it is a steady job for Bud. We had one of the very unusual winters here. Hardly any snow but we did have several days with cold temperatures. One morning in January it was 17 below and quite a few other mornings we had 10 or 12 below zero. Not having snow on the ground we didn't seem to notice how cold it was. I can't understand it, for all the states around us had deep snow and even the western part of this state but Lincoln and Omaha seemed to be in a dry area all winter long. March was nice and dry all but one day and night. I believe that was about the 17th of March when we had a regular little blizzard. Blew down electric wires and kicked up the "devil" while it lasted. We were fortunate right here where we live but all over the city folks were without heat, especially where they had gas furnaces - no electricity to run them.

I want to thank you for sending me the clippings with your last letter.
We both have enjoyed the pictures of you and "Marty" very much and I'm glad to have them. You are getting to be quite an author and in that respect you remind me so much of my sister Lou. She always wanted to write books but never got it accomplished, so maybe you are to fulfill her most cherished desire, WHO KNOWS? You mention in your letter that you are doing some research on the old homes, churches, schools etc. I think that will be wonderful if you can rake up enough information on these older people who were so important in making Pocahontas County what it is today.

You ask me if I might remember something of interest concerning Edwin L. Beard and his family. Well, I'm not too good at remembering a lot of things that I should be able to write you. However, I'm enclosing an old clipping from the Culpeper paper of his death notice and I'm in hopes you might be able to glean a few things from it. Just destroy it when you are through with it. I have another clipping. He was the youngest son of Josiah Beard and was born at Locust Creek, fell heir to the home place after seeing both of his parents through - then he came to Hillsboro and started the mercantile business. I don't know if anyone owned the store before him.
All of Josiah Beard's family were grand people. Edwin Beard's brother Charles gave the land for the Cemetery there in Hillsboro. Edwin L. Beard was an elder in the Presbyterian church in Hillsboro while he lived there.
He was the same in the Culpeper church too. One little thing that stands out with me and I have always treasured in my heart was that we never had breakfast without having chapel. He always read a passage of scripture and said a prayer. The breakfast could wait but God's word came first. He thought that was the right way to start the day and I think he was right.
I don't know if anyone occupied the house there in Hillsboro where we lived or not before the Beard, but I do know the Beards owned it all along.
It was part of Josiah Beard's estate. I think he owned the largest part of Hillsboro at one time. He gave all his sons a big slap of land when they got married. Now, this is not much important information I'm giving you for your book but maybe I can think of something else as I go along and if I do - you will get it.

Bud is about the same as he has been for a long time. Hard for him to walk and he still shakes from the Parkinson in one arm, but he feels very good in other ways, so we feel very grateful that he is no worse than he is. He goes to his doctors at certain times and he gets a very good report each time. His eyes are doing very good, altho he has to have drops put in them four times a day. His arm (Right one) shakes too much for him to put the drops in, so that job falls to me. I don't mind it tho. Is a small thing to do if it keeps him from going blind, which the doctor says it will.

We are not having very nice weather today. For about four days we have had misty weather, just enough to make it dark and dreary. We need rain. Had a very nice Easter Sunday here. Bud just recently read the little book you sent us, "I Plucked the Horsefeathers". He said to tell you he thinks it is a wonderful book and very interesting. I read it as soon as it came and I think the same thing. This man writes in such a real natural way one can't help but liking it.

I had a card from Irene while she was in Florida at Easter time. It is nice that they could all get away for this nice little vacation. I have not heard from any of the other relatives since shortly after Christmas. I presume we all write ourselves out during the Christmas holidays and then clam up for awhile. Mildred don't have much time after she gets through with the school work she does and then try to keep house besides. I never hear from Estelle but it is just as well.

We are having some trouble here in Omaha with "home-made bombs" being planted around in Grocery Stores and other places of business. There has been eleven of them up to this time and while no one has been killed - they have caused a lot of damage. It must be "pranksters" doing this but it is a very dangerous thing to do. There is quite a large reward out for them, but even so, they have not been caught. I don't think small kids could make these bombs, so it must be older youngsters or adults. If they keep it up someone is bound to be hurt or killed. I just heard on TV a few minutes ago that the Service Stations had been ordered to keep their "rest rooms" locked for safety. That seems to be one of their favorite places to plant these bombs. Can you imagine anyone having such an evil mind? I hope they are caught very soon and punished.

Well, I believe I have told you all for this time. Not such a good letter but I want you to hear from us. I hope not to be so long in writing next time. Please remember me to your Mother when you see her. I hope she keeps well this summer and enjoys herself like she always does. Love to all the family from us.
